A brief account of the key events in English history. The Romans controlled most of present-day England and Wales, and founded a large number of cities that still exist today. London, York, St Albans, Bath, Exeter, Lincoln, Leicester, Worcester, Gloucester, Chichester, Winchester, Colchester, Manchester, Chester, Lancaster, were all Roman towns, as in fact were all the cities with names now ending in -chester, -cester or -caster, which derive from Latin castrum ("fortification"). He also happened to be gay, which led to his imprisonment and tragic murder by his wife and her lover (see Gloucester). 14th & 15th centuries : Hundred Years' War & War of the Roses.

Relationships between England and Scotland were similar to those between England and Wales, but the Scots had a greater degree of independence. Edward I had made several military raids to the Northern kingdom, seized the national treasure "the Stone of Destiny" from the Scone Abbey (1296) but had failed to subdue the Scots. Edward I who had been called "the Hammer of Scots" died not far from the border of Scotland during his last abortive campaign to defeat the Scots. The rule of his son, Edward II (1307-1327) is traditionally characterized as a great failure of the hereditary principle. It examines punishment before imprisonment and why imprisonment came to be used instead. It probes the successes and failures of the penitentiary and looks into efforts to find alternative means of punishment. ( ) AlexTheHunn | Nov 30, 2005 | Published reviews. In England and Wales, life imprisonment is a sentence which lasts until the death of the prisoner, although in most cases the prisoner will be eligible for parole (officially termed "early release") after a fixed period set by the judge. This period is known as the "minimum term" (previously known as the whole life "tariff"). In some exceptionally grave cases, however, a judge may order that a life sentence should mean life by making a "whole life order.". Get this from a library!
