Notes

Although The Beggars Bush was rewritten in versions called The Royal Merchant and The Merchant of Bruges the text remained substantially the same. Playbills often included The Beggars Bush as a sub-title.

¹ Bowers speculates there may have been an earlier performance, but there is no evidence of this.

² “Upon St. Johns daye at night was acted The Beggars Bush by the kings players” Before the King & Queen. Plays for performances at Court at Christmas were often selected from plays which had been popular during the London theatre season. ³ Beggars Bushe in a bill of the King’s company for plays presented at court (Bentley, p.313)

⁴ Kawachi says before King Charles and Queen Henrietta. Bentley, p.313 Dramatic records of Sir Henry Herbert, Adams, J.Q. ed. (1917).

¹² Dorenkamp, from Bentley, G.E., The Jacobean and Caroline Stage, (1941)

¹³ Bentley, p.314 ref. Adams, records this and next performance in a list of plays acted by "the Kings Companie at the Red Bull and the new house in Gibbon's Tennis Court near Clare Market".

¹⁴ Samuel Pepys Diary: "Mr Shipley and I to the new Play-house near Lincoln's-Inn-Fields (which was formerly Gbbhon's tennis court) where the play of "beggar's Bush" was newly begun; and so we went in and saw it, it was well acted; and here I saw for the first time Moone [Mohun], who is said to be the best actor in the world, lately come over with the King, and indeed it is the finest play-house, I believe, that ever was in England" (<http://www.pepysdiary.com/>) The play seems to have been a favourite. Pepys records seeing it four times in his diary.

¹⁷ Edward Browne paid 1s to see Beggars bush (B.M. MS Sloane 1900 (Bentley p.315 and Sprague, Arthur C, Beaumont and Fletcher on the Restoration Stage, Cambridge, 1960)

¹⁹ Samuel Pepys Diary: "To the King's play-house, and there saw a piece of "Beggar's Bush", which I have not seen some years".

²⁰ Included in a long list of plays formerly acted at Blackfriars and now allowed to the King's Company.

²² A setting of the song Bring out your Coney skins by Samuel Ackroyde who was active 1685 onwards was published in Vinculum Societatis (1678), pp6-7 (Wing V.458) (Cutts, John P., A Newly Discovered Musical Setting From Fletcher's Beggars' Bush, Comparative Drama Volume 5, Issue 2, Summer 19)

²³ The Duke's Company combined with the King's Company to form the United Companies and moved to Drury Lane, where they revived a series of plays, including The Beggars Bush. CiBeggars Busher, Apology, ed Lowe, I, 95-96 says this was because Mohun and Hart were getting older and the younger actors were hungry for parts. (TLS1, source Downes, J, Roscius Anglicanus, (London, 1886, pp.39-40))

²⁵ The song, "Bring out your cony-skins [fair] maids to me", set for this play by Samuel Ackroyde, is in Vinculum Societatis, 1687.

Wright; Boors – Sherman, Harris, Cross; Jaculine – Mrs Cox; Bertha – Mrs Rogers. Sprague (1926) p.80 reports that the dedication said : “not doubting in the least of a prosperous Voyage, especially now full freighted and cleared from the Embargo’ the Actors had formerly put on him on the stage”. Sprague also quotes from Chetwood, A General History of the Stage, 1741, p.31 : “If moving the passions is a great Art, I think Mr. Wilks was master of that Art. There was no avoiding feeling his Distress in another Line, when he perform’d the part of the Royal Merchant in the Beggar’s Bush, a comedy of Fletcher’s. The Character is noted for benevolent Charity; and when his flinty hearted Creditors had just press’d him for Payment, Clause his old Beadman (tho’ his Father in Disguise) comes as if to beg his usual Charity, when the Merchant replies with a Tone that sings into the Soul. ‘Clause, I pray thee leave me for by my Troth, I have nothing now to give thee.’”

Bullock; 1st Boor – Spiller; Gertrude – Mrs Spiller. Dancing by Moreau, Mrs Moreau, Miss Schooling. [NOTE James Quin was born in Covent Garden of Irish descent. He had a long and distinguished career. After slighting an actor called Williams or Bowen, he killed him in self defence when Williams ambushed him or attacked him in a tavern, after Quin refused to fight a duel with him. He was a successful character actor, with roles including Shylock, and Falstaff, in which he was commemorated by a Crown Derby statuette. He also played in Dublin and either from theatrical earnings or family property seems to have become wealthy enough to play part time and live in Bath. At the start of the 1747-8 season he wrote to his manager, John Rich “I am at Bath – yours, James Quin”. To which Rich is said to have responded “Stay there, and be damned – your, John Rich”. Quin retired soon after and lived a convivial life in Bath, being friendly with Pope, Swift and Elizabeth Montague who described him as a perfect Falstaff being “naturally a man of wit and mirth, a lover of sack and la bonne chere . . .”. It is suggested that if Garrick, with whom he was on good terms, and Macklin, had not appeared he might have been known as the greatest actor of the first half of the eighteenth century. BD]

125 Hughes, S.C., The Pre-Victorian Drama in Dublin, Dublin 1904 reprinted New York, 1970, p.68 based on old newspapers and other sources says there were 37 performances in Dublin in the period he covered. This is only one of which he gives details, giving as the date 1735. Hughes's work has been described as "abounding in slips". His plot summary is inaccurate: "The ruler of Bruges has been deposed, and becomes the King of the Gipsies (Clause). He is restored." He also says that "A coronation scene was shown in this comedy at Rainsford Street in honour of George. "Well, brothers, our merry old king is dead; What matters? We'll soon have another instead." The text is from the play, but there was no particular reason to honour George II in Dublin in 1735 - he came to the throne in 1727. Hughes seems to be giving a confused report of the performance noted by Anne Plumptre in A Narrative of a Residence in Ireland 1814 to 1815 (Henry Colburn, London, 1817, p.68), when in response to an extravagant production of Henry VIII at the new Aungier Street theatre the rival Rainsford Street theatre put on a play she describes as The Royal Merchant or Beggars Bush "in which a mock pageant of the coronation of King Clause threw such complete ridicule on the serious one in Henry the Eighth that the latter ceased to attract. Thus the keen edge of the satire being blunted, King Clause also speedily sank into oblivion." It is clear from the context that she was describing a historical incident, not a performance she herself attended, but one sufficiently striking to have stayed in the memory of Dubliners. Hughes also wrote "Clause was played by Holman." This must be at another date as Holman is probably Joseph Holman, a celebrated actor manager who appeared in plays in Dublin & London from the 1780's onwards. Holman played at Covent Garden with Thomas Hull who wrote the operatic version of The Beggars Bush and may have performed in the play in London.

183 The company from Bath travelled through Wiltshire, appearing at the Vine Inn, Salisbury in the period before 1765 when a permanent company base in Salisbury was set up (Driscoll, P., The Theatrical Stage in Eighteenth Century Wiltshire, Talk to Regional History Centre, UWE, 01.04.09). It therefore seems highly likely that they performed the play as part of their repertoire in Salisbury, and probably elsewhere in Wiltshire.

¹⁹⁸ Adapted into an opera of 3 act by Thomas Hull, with music by Thomas Linley, senior (1733-1799). Several songs are added, omitted or changed, Goswin is called Harrol, and Higgen's canting speech on the election of Clause is omitted. The playbill says "Never Performe'd Founded on Beaumont & Fletcher". Music by Thomas Linley. A Comic Opera the Music entirely New. In his diary Neville recorded "The music may be good, but the piece is trifling and childish, barren or incident and character except for that of Clause played by Bensley and the frightened peasant At the beginning of the 2nd act some fellows in the 2s Gallery began a disturbance, but were turn'd out and carried before Sir John Fielding, where they confessed that they were hired to disturb this performance by a publican, but refused to say who . . ." (Neville MS Diary). (Words and Music published by Welcker 1768). Thomas Hull was the son of a London Apothecary, educated at Charterhouse. He appears to have started his career in Dublin and Bath, where he fell out with John Palmer over the terms of his appointment as manager of the Orchard Theatre in 1757. From 1759 was a regular and reliable player at Covent Garden, ending his career in 1807. He wrote or adapted about 20 works for the stage, including a masque concocted around music by J.S.Bach. The music was written by Thomas Linley, a music master based in Bath. He was very successful, living in a large house in Orchard Street near the theatre and later in the Royal Crescent. He lead concerts at the Bath Assembly Rooms, and the Long Room at Hotwells in Bristol. The Royal Merchant was his fist composition for the stage, although he had played violin for the King & Queen at Covent Garden. His daughter had previously appeared in Hull's masque, and later married Sheridan. In 1776 Linley sold and mortgaged his considerable properties in Bath to purchase part of Garrick's share in Drury Lane, where he became Music Director. His wife became wardrobe mistress and many of his large family became musicians or performers.]

who had been at Cambridge with Kinnaird & Byron, and companion to Lord Byron on his travels in Europe.) William Hazlitt said that the "everyone went away satisfied", and that Kean as Godwin/Florez "made a forcible appeal to John Bull". Music was written by Thomas Simpson Cooke, (b. Dublin 1782, d. London, 26.02.48). Hazlitt says Miss L Kelly played a female beggar, presumably Jaculin, who sang a number of songs with "sweetness and characteristic naivete". (Hazlitt, W., Criticisms and Dramatic Essays of the English Stage, London, 1854, p.227-231. Hazlitt's review first appeared in Leigh Hunt's The Examiner, which also includes the text of the epilogue.

²²³ Charles Dickens considered reviving the play and performing in it as part of the schemes to support the Shakespeare Birthplace Trust. Forster, J, The Life of Charles Dicken, Book Six: at the Summit (1847-52), wrote, "This was the year when a committee had been formed for the purchase and preservation of Shakespeare's house at Stratford . . . Dickens threw himself into the new scheme with all his old energy; and prefatory mention may be made of our difficulty in selection of a suitable play to alternate with our old Ben Jonson. The Alchemist had been such a favourite with some of us, that, before finally laying it aside, we went through two or three rehearsals, . . . the same trouble, with the same result, arising from a vain desire to please everybody, was taken successively with Beaumont and Fletcher's Beggar's Bush . . . Choice was at last made of Shakespeare's Merry Wives, in which . . . Dickens was Justice Shallow". (<<http://www.lang.nagoya-u.ac.jp/~matsuoka/CD-Forster-6.html>> accessed 24.10.10)

Beggars Bush Barracks was a British Army barracks located at Beggars Bush in Dublin, Ireland. The barracks were designed as a training depot for the British Army and were completed in 1827. Two squadrons of the South Irish Horse were formed at the barracks in the early 20th century. The squadrons were mobilised at the barracks in August 1914 before being deployed to the Western Front.

Beggars' Bush is a Jacobean era stage play, a comedy in the canon of John Fletcher and his collaborators that is a focus of dispute among scholars and critics. The authorship and the date of the play have long been debated by commentators. Critics generally agree that the hands of Fletcher and Philip Massinger are manifest in the text; but they dispute the presence of Francis Beaumont. Cyrus Hoy, in his wide-ranging survey of authorship problems in Fletcher's canon, judged all three dramatists to have
