To determine your current reading speed, take your practice book (which should lay flat when open on a table) and count the number of words in 5 lines. Divide this number of words by 5, and you have your average number of words-per-line. Example: 62 words/5 lines = 12.4, which you round to 12 words-per-line. Training peripheral vision to register more effectively can increase reading speed over 300%. Untrained readers use up to 1/2 of their peripheral field on margins by moving from 1st word to last, spending 25-50% of their time "reading" margins with no content. To illustrate, let us take the hypothetical one line: "Once upon a time, students enjoyed reading four hours a day." Advice On Careers & Achieving Success. Learn faster, achieve more. Blog. Ultralearning.Â Seven years ago, I read some books and articles on speed reading and started practicing some of the methods. I found I was able to increase my reading speed from 450 word per minute to 900 in the drills, so I published an article entitled, Double Your Reading Rate, which has since become one of the most popular on this website. When I wrote the piece, I based the article purely on my personal experience along with the how-to books I had read. I didnâ€™t have any solid scientific research to back my experiments. Since that time, Iâ€™ve had some lingering doubts about speed reading.
