CURRENT PROJECTS

1. Expert Skills Program at Texas Tech. A professionalism program that approaches learning skills as clinical skills that can be developed through the application of Deliberate Practice. For more information, visit the SuccessTypes Medical Education website. Introductory video at <https://youtu.be/UDxIVmKFBoo>.
2. SuccessTypes Medical Education website. Updated to include free access to SuccessTypes in Medical Education book and to the Expert Skills Program at Texas Tech (ESP). Links to useful readings in medical education as well as links for counselors working with at-risk medical students. Videos have been upgraded for uploading to the SuccessTypes channel on YouTube. Each video has a basic introductory version with future development of an advanced version that takes each topic in depth. An ESP Blog has been established to report updates in relevant research and results from other schools that have adopted the ESP. This support is intended to facilitate the adoption by the remainder of medical schools in the USA. A newsletter, the ESP One-Pager, has been implemented at this site to support students at Texas Tech and other institutions that are participating in the program.
3. Academic Achievement Workshops. Generally focused on integrative, brain-based learning strategies. Emphasizes active learning and self-directed, problem-oriented team learning. These are presented by invitation throughout the year at medical schools around the country.
4. Flipped classroom design for clinical clerkships. In collaboration with Frank Babb, MD, I have helped to establish the active learning environment of the flipped classroom to solve problems with low motivation and effectiveness associated with the traditional lecture format. Our early successes have motivated us to expand this program to the regional centers with the ultimate goal of influencing the remaining clerkships to coordinate the process to produce a Step 2CK preparation.
