Silken Threads leads the reader through a wonderful journey charting the evolution of the embroidery of the East Asian region. Dr. Chung apart from being a Master Embroiderer, and probably the only woman in the world who has had a Museum named after her in her native Korea, is also a well respected Art Historian. This is not a "how to" book but a serious study of the history and art as it relates to the embroidery of China, Japan, Korea and Vietnam. It is well illustrated and reflects the many years of study that Dr. Chung has spent researching this absorbing area of study. Read more.

China's relationship with Japan is one of the utmost importance and sensitivity. The high level of trade between the two countries belies an underlying and long standing tension. Crude but useful parallels can be drawn between the relationship of China and Japan and that between Britain (U.K.) and Europe. Both Japan and Britain are islands off a main continent. In both cases the last four hundred years have seen a powerful island nation emerge. Britain considers itself to have a unique national culture and yet Britain's roots are in Europe, the same can be said for Japan with respect
