So I give inadequate thanks for tulip trees, for the early morning song of thrushes, for the beauty of cardinals, for my delightful chickadees, for the first early spring flowers, for dogwoods in spring, and the glory of the world in autumn, for cotton-tailed deer--and for pepsisawa! The list is endless--I'll never forget. Nell" |

It is impossible to express my deep gratitude to you, and to Bill, who live the Program so perfectly and share it with so many. God guided me to you, all those years ago, and kept me close ever since. I can no more thank Him adequately for this blessing than I can you. But I can always love and bless you. Devotedly, Margaret" |

Ryders and I called on you. I very much wish for your continued health and the fulfillment of the mission before you which we discussed. It is my humble thought that future generations will place you in history for the service you have rendered in your field, as does the present honor you. You are the channel through which so many depend for the truth and their emancipation from their lost way. I know you will both continue to honor and glorify God which contributes as much to the chief en of mankind. May we also keep in mind the boy we discussed who has also lost his way. Affetionately yours Charlie N. Wonascott The Hanover Bank July 9. 1951" |

Stepping Stones is the historic home of Alcoholics Anonymous co-founder Bill Wilson (Bill W.) and his wife, co-founder of Al-Anon/Alateen Lois Wilson (Lois W.), in Bedford Hills, New York. The historic site features their house (a Dutch Colonial Revival structure from 1920), Bill W.'s writing studio nicknamed "Wit's End", approximately 15,000 objects (furniture, memorabilia, etc.) left by the Wilsons, a water pump house, the original one-car garage, a two-car garage / Welcome Center with an orientation display highlighting some of the 100,000 items in the Stepping Stones. Bill died in 1971 and Lois died in 1988. The Wilsons did not have children. Their property was turned over to the Stepping Stones Foundation which maintains it and conducts the tours and presentations.
